No. 197.

WEDNESDAY, February 1, 1749.

AIX LA CHAPELLE, September 16.

IT is now certain that the great work of peace is on the point of being concluded: The definitive treaty is not only drawn up, but approved of in every point. The ſecretaries of the miniſters are preparing the four inſtruments, which are to be ſigned at once; which is a piece of work that will take up ſeveral days, the plan brought from Paris making near eighty pages in folio. That the ſigning of the definitive treaty may not be delayed, it has been agreed to paſs over ſome private difficulties, which are to be ſettled afterwards by the intereſted parties themſelves.

Sept. 25. On the 23d a grand conference was held at count Caunitz's, upon the ſubject of ſome diſpatches which his excellency had received from his court, and which are ſaid to be of the laſt importance. 'Tis pretended her Imperial majeſty declares, that far from occaſioning the leaſt delay in the conſummation of the great work of peace, ſhe is ready to ſet her hand to the conditions ſtipulated in thoſe diſpatches, and to take a ſhare in the treaty there, as a principal or acceding party. We dont know what her conditions are, or how they were reliſhed in the conference; but the next day another was held at the Britiſh miniſter's, and expreſſes were afterwards diſpatched to Vienna, Madrid, and Turin; and 'tis ſaid we muſt ſee them return, before the laſt hand can be put to the concluſion of the general peace.

Rome, Auguſt 26. The congregation De propaganda Fide, and the general of the Dominicans, have received certain advice, that a biſhop of that order had ſuffered martyrdom for the faith in China, after having converted the executioner at the place of execution, who likewiſe ſuffered death at the ſame time.

Gibraltar, Auguſt 26. Since the receiving the news of ſigning the preliminary articles of peace, the communication has been opened between this place and the territories about.

Franckfort, Sept. 2. The miniſtracy and the burgeſſes of this city have reſolved to ſend a deputation to Vienna, in order to make freſh repreſentations for preventing, if poſſible, the Proteſtants from obtaining leave to build a church within the walls of the city.

Rome, September 7. On Sunday morning the Pope conferred the order of prieſthood upon cardinal Stuart, who celebrated his firſt maſs on Wednesday in his own chapel, and gave the ſacrament to the chevalier de St. George, his father, in preſence of ſeveral perſons who aſſiſted at it.

The French poſt-maſter in this city has notified to the public, that the Engliſh and French letters will be diſtributed and received, for the future, as uſual before the war.

Extract of a Letter from Hoſperdam, Sept. 13.

"We are perſuaded, that both the States General and the States of this province will ſuddenly take vigorous meaſures, to prevent for the future ſuch commotions as that which we have very lately ſeen here. The ſtir which the republic has run for ſome weeks paſt, in the opinion of perſons of the deepeſt penetration, has been much greater than that with which it was threatened ſome months ago, by the rapid progreſs of the arms of France.

The military funds of the Engliſh queen have been augmented, in purſuance of count Haugwitz's ſcheme, to fifteen millions, ſix hundred eighty-ſeven thouſand, three hundred ſixty-eight florins a year; of which the kingdom of Bohemia is to pay five millions, two hundred ſeventy thouſand, four hundred eighty-eight, for its contingent.

Madrid, Sept. 10. The laſt courier who brought us from Rome the beatification of father Joſeph Calaſanctius, founder of the pious ſchools, informed us, that father Dunz, biſhop and vicar, hath ſuffered martyrdom in the city of Pekin, capital of the province of Tokien. He was born in the principality of Catalonia, and being conſecrated to a religious life, profeſſed himſelf in the order of St. Dominick. After having paſſed many years in the convent of this order at Saragoſſa, he went to the Philippines, and from thence to China, to labour in the converſion of the Infidels.

Extract of a Letter from Venice, Auguſt 30.

"Laſt week we had here extream boiſterous weather, with ſo much rain as cauſed a very great inundation, whereby men, cattle, houſes, and churches, were driven away; the roads are quite impaſſable, and cannot be repaired in many months, and the loſs and miſery which it hath occaſioned are inexpreſſible.

Dreſden, Sept. 6. The advices from Warſaw inform us, that affairs there are like to take a happy turn at the approaching general diet, but we are aſſured that thoſe things which will be propoſed there, are of ſuch a nature as to demand the king's preſence; even after a reſolution ſhall be taken about them, conformable to his majeſty's intentions, and the advantage of the kingdom. The laſt letters from Prague import, that two columns of the Ruſſian troops are already arrived in Bohemia, and that the third is daily expected there.

Warſaw, Sept. 26. The conſequences of the calamities which afflict our provinces, appear more and more ſenſibly every day. There is no milk to be had in the neighbourhood, and butter is brought 30 or 40 leagues. As for cattle, we have none but what are brought from the moſt diſtant provinces; ſo that here is ſcarce any market for butcher's meat. According to the advices from the great duchy of Lithuania, they have ſuffered alike there from the heat of the ſeaſon, the perfidy of the Jeſuits, and the contagious diſtemper, which is univerſal among the cattle; and what is worſe, a diſtemper begins to appear in that great province, which carries off a great multitude of people.

LONDON.

Sept. 3. We hear from Harborough, that within this fortnight the diſtemper has again broke out among the cattle in Leiceſterſhire, and that one paſture has loſt eleven cows, out of fifteen.

Sept. 5. We expect here in a few days the celebrated Dr. Hulmer, profeſſor and privy counſellor to the king of Pruſſia, from Amſterdam, where, during ſome weeks ſtay, he has performed the moſt ſurprizing cures in caſes of blindneſs; having in a few minutes reſtored many to their ſight who were born blind. He is no leſs famous for his cures in deafneſs, and all other bodily diſeaſes; as the public have ſeen with admiration. He is well known throughout all Germany, and has had the honour to perform ſeveral operations before his majeſty king George at Hanover.

The workmen are ordered to begin whitewaſhing and beautifying St. James's palace, in order to be ready for the reception of his majeſty from Hanover.

We learn from the Hague, that the new regulations for levying of taxes, is by no means ſatisfactory to the inhabitants of the province of Holland; and it is alſo ſaid, that the aboliſhing exciſes has by no means anſwered the ends expected from it. The bunchers, bakers, and brewers, are the only people that are gainers; for they have gradually hoiſted Meat, Bread, and Beer, to their old prices; ſo that what went formerly into the farmer's pockets, goes now into theirs; and the people are like to be charged with a new tax into the bargain. A propoſition has been made to the prince Stadtholder, under the title of A Plan for an equal and perſonal Tax, it conſiſts in levying ſix per cent. on the inhabitants of all houſes, that pay from fifty to one hundred florins rent; and eight florins, that pay from one hundred to a thouſand florins rent; which it is thought will be carried into execution.

Sept. 7. On Thurſday laſt died, at Wimbledon in Surrey, Sir Theodore Janſſen, bart. aged 90 years, and upwards; He married a daughter of sir Robert Hauley, of the Grange in Hampshire; by whom he has left issue, now living, five sons and three daughters; and is succeeded in honour and estate by his eldest son, now sir Abraham Janssen. He left France several years before the persecution of the Protestants in that kingdom, and settled here as a merchant; which profession he maintained with great abilities and integrity, improving a fortune of 20,000 l. Sterling, given him by his father, to above 300,000 l. Sterling, which he possessed 'til the year 1720; when, so far from being in any secret or cabal, he lost above 50,000 l. by that Year's transactions. But as he was unfortunately a director of the South Sea company at that fatal period, the Parliament was pleased to take from him above 222,000 l. by a Law made ex post Facto, near one half of which was real estate; which 222,000 l. was given for the relief of the proprietors of that company, tho' it is well known they had gained several millions by the scheme. This sentence was so much the more severe with regard to this gentleman, as he stood evidently clear of any guilt, as he was a very great loser by the transaction itself, and as it appeared, when his allowance came to be settled in the house of Commons, that he had done many signal services to this nation.

Extract of a Letter from Nantwich, in Cheshire, dated August 28.

" Old Bridget Bostock fills the country with as much talk as the rebels did. She hath all her life-time made it her business to cure the country folks, her neighbours, of sore legs and other disorders; but her reputation seems now so wonderfully to increase, that people come to her from far and near. A year ago she had, as I remember, about 40 under her care: When I went to London she had 100 a week, and they increased so fast, that when I came back she had eight score; and this day five weeks 116. Sunday sennight my wife and I were told by Mr. S——— and Tom M———, who kept the door, and let the people in by fives and sixes, that they had told 600 people she had administer'd to, besides her making a cheese. She at length grew so very faint (for she never breaks her fast 'til she has done), that at six o'clock she was obliged to give over; tho' there were more than 60 persons whom she had not meddled with. Monday last she had 700, and every day near that number. She cures the blind, the lame, the rheumatic, king's evil, hysteric fits, falling sits, shortness of breath, the dropsy, palsy, leprosy, cancers, and in short almost every thing except the French disease, which she will not meddle with; and all the means she makes use of for cure, is only stroking with her fasting spittle, and praying for them. It is hardly credible to think what cures she daily performs; without seeing it appears romantic. Some people grow well while in the house; others on the road home; and, 'tis said, none miss. People come 60 miles round. In our lane, where there have not been seen above two coaches these twelve years, now three or four pass in a day; and the poor come by cart loads. She is about 70 years of age, and keeps old Bostock's house, who allowed her 5*l.* a year wages. She takes no money for her cures, tho' offered to her. Her dress is very plain; viz. a flannel waistcoat, a green linsey apron, a pair of clogs, and a plain cap tied with a halfpenny lace. So many people of fashion come to see her, that several of the poor country people make a comfortable subsistence by holding the horses. In short, the poor, the sick, the lame, the blind, and the deaf, all pray for her, and bless her; but the doctors curse her."

NEW-YORK

December 5. Saturday last a boat loaded with wood, with three men on board, coming to this city, overset by a sudden flaw of wind near Coply battery; but the men getting on the bottom of the boat, and a whale-boat with some brisk hands putting off to their assistance, happily saved their lives, though with imminent danger to their own.

December 19. It seems to be now become dangerous for the good people of this city to be late out a nights, without being sufficiently strong, or well armed, as several attacks and disturbances have been lately made in our streets; but more particularly last night, two gentlemen having been at the Cart and Horse, to see if the Boston post was come in, at their return were attacked and knock'd down, by several persons unknown, one of whom 'tis thought would not have recovered; but happily some assistance being near, two of the villains were apprehended and committed to our goal. Two other gentlemen were attacked but a few minutes before, supposed by the same persons; but luckily happening to have swords by their sides, at the drawing thereof the rogues fled.

In the night between Wednesday and Thursday last, we had here a very violent gale of wind at S. E. which did considerable damage to the small craft along the wharfs, several of which were sunk, and their lading wash'd away, others damaged in their upper works; and had the gale continued much longer, 'tis thought many larger vessels would have suffered also.——We are in pain for some vessels thought to be on the coast at that time.

From the London Evening-Post.

We hear that a Copy of the Prescription of the Waters at Aix la Chapelle, which Dr. Von Clarisero resolves shall at all Events be taken, has, meerly for Form's Sake, been transmitted to Ex———d, and ordered to receive the Sanction of the College at St. J———'s, which the Doctor knows will not be refused. There are said to be at present some Qualities extremely unpalatable in these Waters, and 'tis thought they will not sit easy upon certain Stomachs, for which they are intended by the Doctor, and his French and Dutch Associates.

A Computation having been published in Holland, as received from England, asserting that, notwithstanding all our Remittances abroad, three Millions Sterling have been added in Specie to the National Wealth, since the Beginning of the War; the ingenious Author of An Essay on the Public Funds, &c. publish'd some Months ago, who prov'd the National Debt to be a Part of the National Riches, is desired once more to display his Reasoning in Support of the above Assertion.

A F A B L E.

Hymen, and Death.

SIXTEEN, d'ye say? Nay then 'tis time;
Another year destroys your prime.
But stay——The settlement! " That's made,
Why then's my simple girl afraid?
Yet hold a moment, if you can,
And heedfully the fable scan.

The shades were fled, the morning blush'd,
The winds were in their caverns hush'd,
When Hymen, pensive and sedate,
Held o'er the fields his musing gait.
Behind him, thro' the green-wood shade,
Death's meagre form the god survey'd,
Who quickly, with gigantic stride,
Out-went his pace, and join'd his side;
The chat on various subjects ran,
Till angry Hymen thus began.

Relentless Death, whose iron sway,
Mortals reluctant must obey,
Still of thy pow'r shall I complain,
And thy too partial hand arraign?
When Cupid brings a pair of hearts,
All over stuck with equal darts,
Thy cruel shafts my hopes deride,
And cut the knot, that Hymen ty'd.
Shall not the bloody, and the bold,
The miser, hoarding up his gold,
The harlot, reeking from the stew,
Alone thy fell revenge pursue?
But must the gentle, and the kind
Thy fury, undistinguish'd, find?

The monarch calmly thus reply'd;
Weigh well the cause, and then decide.
That friend of yours, you lately nam'd,
Cupid, alone is to be blam'd;
Then let the charge be fully laid;
That idle boy neglects his trade,
And hardly once in twenty years,
A couple to your temple bears.
The wretches, whom your office blends,
Súlenns now, or Plutus fends;
Hence care, and bitterness, and strife
Are common to the nuptial life.

Believe me; more than all mankind,
Your sex'ries my compassion find;
Yet cruel am I call'd, and base,
Who seek the wretched to release?
The captive from his bonds to free,
Indissoluble, but for me.

'Tis

'Tis I entice him to the yoke;
By me, your crouded altars smoke;
For mortals boldly dare the noose,
Secure that Death will set them loose.

The Ingredients of CONTENTMENT.

SEEK you to know what keeps the mind
In ev'ry scene of Life resign'd?
These are the things:——A little wealth,
A little business just for health;
A little house, and fire nose high,
One spare bed where a friend may lie,
A friend to whom one may impart
The inmost secrets of the heart.
At morning, store of cream and tea,
Either Imperial or Bohea;
At noon one dish, well dress'd, but plain,
With fresh small beer, and linnen clean;
At leisure hours, a book, or song,
To chear the grave, or please the young;
At night good wine, the growth of France,
Or nice sherbet, improv'd by Nantz;
With choice companions two or three,
Of conversation pleasant, free:
These banish cares, to spleen give vent,
These make the balm we call Content;
These ev'ry anxious thought beguile,
But what crowns all is Chloe's smile.

ANNAPOLIS.

Last Friday the Lady of his Excellency our Governor, was happily delivered of a Son.

The same Day in the Evening, a very good Dwelling House at Bladensburg, in the Occupation of William Luckett, was burnt to the Ground; but very little was burnt in it, except a Billiard-Table. The Fire began in the Kitchen.

By his Excellency SAMUEL OGLE, Esq; Governor and Commander in Chief in and over the Province of Maryland,

A PROCLAMATION.

Maryland, ss. WHEREAS several well-meaning People of this Province have been misled into a Belief, that his Lordship had not given his Approbation to the Act entituled, An Act for amending the Staple of Tobacco, for preventing Frauds in his Majesty's Customs; and for the Limitation of Officers Fees, which Approbation I received during the Sitting of the last Session of Assembly, and signified the same to the late Lower House, by a Message to the Speaker of the said House; but as, by some Accident, the same is not inserted among the Printed Proceedings of the said Assembly, I have therefore thought fit, with the Advice of his Lordship's Council of State, to Publish and Declare his Lordship's Approbation of the said Law: And, to the Intent that all Persons concerned may have due Notice thereof, I do Strictly charge and require the several Sheriffs of this Province, to make this my Proclamation public in their respective Counties, in the usual Manner, as they will answer the contrary at their Peril.

GIVEN at the City of Annapolis, this 30th Day of January, in the 34th Year of his Lordship's Dominion, Anno Domini 1748.

God save the KING.

J. ROSS, Cl. Cons.
